

VICTIM NEAR DEATH, ASSASSIN PURSUED

Mystery Veils Motive for Shooting Which Is Likely to Prove Fatal.

man who had called up the house several times.
The shooting occurred shortly before 2 o'clock in Fifteenth street, just south of H street, a short distance from the Reilly home.
Reilly had been to the theater last evening with a young woman living in Georgetown. He took her home and was on his way home when he was shot.
Police officers, who were in the neighborhood at the time, were attracted by the shots and hurried to the scene. Schultz was running east in H street. The officer started in pursuit and several shots were exchanged, none of which took effect. Schultz easily outdistanced his pursuer. He then returned to Reilly, who was lying on the pavement.
"D. H. Schultz shot me," Reilly told the officer. "He worked at Progressive League headquarters."
Dr. J. R. Wellington this afternoon performed an operation on Reilly in the hope of saving the young man's life. His condition, however, is critical. He was shot twice, one bullet entering the abdomen from the left side and the other out on the right side. The other wound was in the leg.
Schultz, who lived at the Grand Hotel, started August 11 for California. Since then his friends have received several postal mail in Colorado.

Mystery Shrouds Motive.

"He is a good boy," declares the mother. "The only wrong thing he did was to keep company with the man Schultz, after his father and I told him not to."

Mystery surrounds the motive for the assault upon the young student, Schultz, and he had been inseparable companions for months, until the victim's father had given him strict orders to cut short his association. Then the young student and the older man had met each other in the downtown section of the city several times.

This had reached the boy's parents. Reilly had subsequently ceased association with Schultz. He had not seen the older man for several weeks.

That Schultz arrived in the city yesterday from Colorado, laid in wait to meet the boy and after having his refusal to leave the city, shot him. It is the theory of the police.

Post Card From Colorado.

To substantiate the theory of the shooting the detectives investigating the affair point to the fact that Oscar King Davis, secretary of the Progressive national committee, by which Schultz was formerly employed, received a postal card from Schultz in Colorado several days ago. The man had left the Grand Hotel, where he lived in the city, about a week before the receipt of the post card by Mr. Davis. He had not been seen in his usual haunts about the city.

Either he went directly to Colorado and stayed there, or so, starting in time to reach Washington yesterday, or he never went to Colorado at all, but had some friend of his in that State mail the postal card to Mr. Davis and to throw the police and others off the track in event he did wish to cover his tracks. It is believed.

Private Secretary To Davis.

For more than a year Schultz was private secretary to Mr. Davis. He affiliated himself with the Progressive party's local headquarters on March 1, 1912. He resigned and said that he was going to California to accept a position. Schultz was formerly employed with the Ishman Canal Commission on the isthmus.

Young Reilly is twenty years of age. In June he graduated with honors from the McKinley Manual Training School, and then enrolled at the Georgetown University Law School. He is a good student, and met Schultz, who is ten years his senior, while working as a clerk at the Progressive Party headquarters.

A reincoat believed to have belonged to Schultz was found this afternoon on the common near Fifteenth and B streets northeast. It is thought Schultz discarded the coat after the pistol battle with Police Officer Giles.

Schultz Mild Mannered, Declares O. K. Davis

D. H. Schultz, accused of having shot his chum, Francis A. Reilly, early this morning, was to all appearances a mild-mannered man, and was never seen to give any exhibition of a violent temper, according to O. K. Davis, secretary of the Progressive national committee, under whose direction Schultz worked until a week ago.

"The news of the shooting came as a great surprise to me, for I never observed anything about Schultz that indicated he would get mixed up in an affair of this nature," said Mr. Davis this morning. "He resigned his place here about a week ago, saying he was going to accept a position offered him in California, and I had a postal card from him a few days ago, dated from some town in Colorado, which led me to believe that he was on the coast by this time."

"Schultz and Reilly were employed here at the same time and I am certain there was no friction between them at that time. During the latter part of Schultz's employment here I did not notice anything about him that would indicate he was laboring under any mental stress or that there was anything on his mind."

EXPECT BANKERS TO INDORSE CURRENCY

Prediction of Reynolds Shows Disposition to Favor Wilson's Money Measure.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial Bank of Chicago, and leader of the conservative element in the bankers' conference on the Owen-Glass currency bill, predicted today that before the conference adjourns, late this afternoon, resolutions pledging co-operation with President Wilson in currency reform, but recommending amendments to the measure, will be adopted.
A resolution, asking Congress to postpone currency action until a committee had drafted a new bill, offered yesterday afternoon by James D. Forgan, president of the First National Bank of Chicago, was rejected by the Resolutions Committee at a session that lasted until early today. The Forgan resolution was said to represent the attitude of the more radical opponents of the Owen-Glass bill.

MULHALL ADDS TO McDERMOTT CHARGE

Two New Men Called to Testify Before Lobby Investigators of the House.

do with the Cannon rules fight," said Mulhall.

Promised $5,000; Got $2,000.

"Congressman McDermott told me that John McDermott, of New York, an official of the Brewers' Association, had promised him $5,000, but had come across with only $2,000. I. H. McMichael, John McDermott's Congressman, McDermott, and Mr. Fleming, brother-in-law of the Congressman, all told me that the Congressman had got $2,000 from the brewers."
Mulhall related his charge that McDermott "had forged" Mulhall's name to the back of a check made out to the colonel when Mulhall was helping McDermott in the 1912 campaign. This check, he said, was a duplicate of one which went temporarily astray and was contributed by Harold McCormick, of Chicago, while Mulhall was collecting campaign funds for McDermott.
McDermott's name, he said, had told him to cash the original for his expenses when he showed up and then had obtained a duplicate and forged the colonel's endorsement. McDermott denies this.

After Mulhall left the stand, Miss Harriet G. Daly, chief telephone operator at the Capitol, testified briefly regarding numerous long distance telephone calls made by I. H. McMichael to Colonel Mulhall at Baltimore.
The calls were charged to Congressman McDermott," said Miss Daly, "as McMichael was the Congressman's secretary, and most of the calls were from McDermott's room. McMichael phoned three times from the Democratic cloak room."

Reviews Senate Story.

Colonel Mulhall's testimony today was a review of his Senate statements to a large extent. He again told of going to Chicago to help McDermott in the 1912 campaign.

He visited many Chicago manufacturers, he said, receiving contributions from a majority of them. He said: "A few did not contribute," he said. "Exclusive of the $250 check from Harold McCormick we received about $750 from the manufacturers."

"McDermott didn't give me a red cent for expenses. I had to pay my watch chain when I finally left. All I got was the $75 McMichael advanced from a majority of them. It is not true that I run up a hotel bill on him or received any money. I got none of the campaign contributions."

Had "High Words."

Mulhall said he and McMichael, former McDermott protégé, had "high words" when the colonel returned to Washington. They met in Fritz Reuter's.

The row occurred over the $75 advanced by McMichael and the $250 check which Colonel Mulhall charged McDermott "forged" by indorsing the colonel's name without Mulhall's consent.
"I told McMichael that McDermott was an infamous liar if he claimed to have paid the expenses of my Chicago trip, or that I had run up a hotel bill on him," McMichael and I almost came to blows."

"I worked very hard for McDermott in Chicago; the hardest twenty-two days campaigning I have ever done." Colonel Mulhall said he felt badly over McDermott's treatment of him, and their friendship ceased "when McDermott sent somebody to Fritz Reuter's to beat up on me."

Retells Story of Check.

The colonel retold the story of the McCormick check. McCormick, he said, contributed $250 to the McDermott campaign.

The check wasn't received at the colonel's hotel, he said, and he left Chicago with the understanding that it was to be forwarded to him in Baltimore.
"McDermott said I could have the check for my expenses when it arrived," he phoned McCormick's secretary about the original check.
"When the check finally came, I cashed it in Baltimore. Soon I got a letter from the bank that a duplicate had been cashed in Chicago. I then signed an affidavit that I knew nothing about the duplicate and had authorized no one to sign my name to a duplicate. 'Had you told anyone to get a duplicate or to indorse it?'"

Accuses McDermott.

"Who signed your name on the back of the duplicate?" asked Mr. Stafford.
"All I know is that McDermott said he did it."
"You are sure there was no agreement that McDermott was to get a duplicate and use it?"
"I know of no such understanding. 'You were to take the check for your expenses?'"
"Yes."

McDermott recently issued a statement denying this part of the Mulhall charges. There was an express agreement, he says, that a duplicate should be obtained and cashed by McDermott. He had been abandoned of tracing the original.

Names the "Inside Ring."

Colonel Mulhall read into the record the names of the ten men constituting what he called the "inside ring" in the National Association of Manufacturers. This "ring," he averred, had been running things with a high hand for a number of years.
"If you can get 50 decent manufacturers to come here and back them up in this campaign after this thing is fully exposed," he said, "I will go out of business."

The ten "ringleaders" were named as follows:
J. P. Byrd, general manager, New York; C. W. Post, of Battle Creek; David N. Barry, of Indianapolis; George B. Boudinot, of New York; Fred Schwedman, of St. Louis; James Emery, of Washington; J. Parker Nevins, attorney for Byrd; F. P. Porter, of New York; Marshall Cushing, a former member, of New York; and John Kirby, Jr., president, of Dayton.

Mulhall characterized Counsel Emery as a "generalissimo and hot air artist," and he took a shot at Post by saying "he is the man who discovered four union men in his factory and was shocked."

Colonel Mulhall was excused until Monday morning when he will face cross-examination by McDermott's attorney, James E. Smith.

"I am not afraid of him," said Mulhall, "but I would like to have a rest of a day before I begin the cross-examination."
Asserting that they did not know why they had been summoned and had nothing of importance to reveal, Hugh A. F. Harvey, secretary of the Liquor Dealers' Association, and Frank J. Solan, a saloon keeper, were summoned before the committee this morning. When the two men reached the committee room they were informed by Chairman Garfield that the committee had been examining the morning. When the two men reached the committee room they were informed by Chairman Garfield that the committee had been examining the morning. When the two men reached the committee room they were informed by Chairman Garfield that the committee had been examining the morning.

"GENE" KERNAN HELD IN SHOOTING CASE

Man Known Here Charged With Assault, After O'Reilly Is Found With Wound.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Pending an investigation into the shooting of John O'Reilly at Sheepshead bay, Eugene Kernan, who told the police he was a theatrical manager, was held on a charge of assault today.
O'Reilly was found by the crew of a street car early today, suffering from a bullet wound in the hand. O'Reilly asked that "Chick" Trigger, known to the police as a gang leader and gunman, be notified.

Kernan appeared in his bath robe and house slippers when an officer called at his home and said he had "just shot a yegg." He declared the burglar sought to enter the house at a second-story window. O'Reilly had told the police he had been lured away from Coney Island by two men. They tried to take $20 away from him, he said, and then shot him.

Detective Blake said he recognized O'Reilly and Kernan as two men he had seen drinking together at Coney Island last night. He said he found so many discrepancies in Kernan's story that he arrested him. O'Reilly was also held on a charge of attempted burglary.

Will Drive Senators.

The strength of the bill in the House, the President and his advisers believe, will drive a number of recalcitrant Democratic Senators to line up for the proposed legislation.

The optimistic view taken at the White House is not shared in all quarters. Much of the talk among Senators about forcing a bill through this session is the effect of no general revision of the currency laws is possible in the special session, and that the full strength of opposition among the Democrats will not be revealed until the tariff bill is passed.

It is clear, however, that the President, encouraged by success in the House, is going to put the screws down on Democratic Senators and insist most vigorously that the bill be passed, unchanged in essentials.

TREASURY WORKERS TO BE PAID AUG. 30

Last Day of Month Falls on Sunday, and the Next One Is Holiday.

All clerks and other employees of the Treasury Department will receive salaries for the last half of August, Saturday, August 30.
Payments will be made under a decision by the Controller of the Treasury, today, in which he holds that as the last falls on Sunday, the service month, so far as the majority of Government workers is concerned, ends on August 29, and payments can be made that day. Otherwise the Treasury employees would not receive their money until Tuesday, September 2, as Monday is Labor Day and a holiday.

The law provides that when a pay day falls on Sunday or a holiday, payments must be made on the day following, but the Controller holds that under his decision making payments on the last day of the month possible, Saturday is pay day as it is the last working day.
It is probable that the other Government departments will make payments Saturday.
